A REMARKABLE PROPHECY. Not long ago was found at Toledo, Spain, in a monastery, a paper containing

"In the far West beyond the ocean will rise a nation which will be great in power to and fro on the earth will observe this nation, and, determined to destroy their happiness, will there send two monsters. one to the North and the other to the South, and he will give them strawberries. and they will eat them; and, after they have eaten, they will feel a great thirst, not to be quenched with anything else but can navy blockades American coast; blood. They will, therefore, cause the brother to slay the brother, the father to slay the son, and the son the father, and they will drink the blood of the slain, and it will bring lamentation and wailing throughout the land. And, when the time is fullfilled, there will rise a strong man in the North who will take the monters and bind them and draw them into and happiness will again prevail throughout, and the people will praise the Lord." It is said the monks in said monastery maintain that this prophecy was written and the armies of the North and South are before the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus; that Ferdinand of reunion will arouse the fear and admiraand Isabella were, in the main, induced by it to fit out the ship for Columbus, and that the first part of it too is fulfilled in America, and that the other part soon will strength. Before the war this vast nation lay streched along the continent undefended by forts, or navies, without an army, with millions of brave men, but with only a few thousands of soldiers. Commerce, agriculture, magnifactures, invention, education, engrossed all its energies; to war it gave no thought. England and France were rivals in the creation of navies, but the safety of American commerce was trusted to the comity of nations. America was a giant without armor, and in a struggle with other Powers brute strength must at first have poorly supplied the want of discipline and armament. Yet the nation was radically war-like, having the pride and spirit that belong to youth and might. The rebellion has changed it. Four years of war have equipped America from head to foot in armor, have placed new and terand wealth; and Satan, in one of his walks rible weapons in her hand, and made her appear to the world like a new Rome, er like France in the great days of the first

But the immense forces raised in the North and South are marshalled against each other; the great forts are defended by Americans against Americans; the Ameri-American pirates prey upon American merchantmen; American cities are besieged by American armies, and every battle that is fought is at once a victory and a defeat to Americans. And all this, for what? To divide the greatness of the continent, and place two rival American nations side by side, with an imaginary bounty line, with perpetual cause of quarrel, the sea, where it is the deepest, and peace and to the plain advantage of Europe. Sooner or later this struggle must end; we believe it can only end in the acknowledgment by all Americans of the Government of the United States; when this is done, marshaled under one flag, then the results tion of the world.-Philadelphia Press.

A Country Postmater's Report. Speaking of Postmasters, reminds us of one that figured over in Fulton County, in the reign of Old Buck. He was a new appointee, and withal a little unsettled in his mind respecting the duties of his position, which, we remark parenthetically, involved about 830 business yearly. Mr. Jenkins-for such was his name-had read in the instructions sent him, that he must make a "quarterly report" to headquarters.
